Two Extremes: Life and Death The cycle of life is just a speck on the horizon, for humans there are 100 years or just 36,500 days. For a moth, there are just two weeks, or 14 days. In this given cycle of life, from life to death, one must find a goal, achieve that goal, all while staying in check with the ultimate fear, death.

Two Extremes : Life And Death - 2104 Words | Bartleby

The universe can exist in any state between two extremes, namely the singularity and heat death. Life exists in a much smaller window of opportunity, and the New Jerusalem in one smaller still. Stacked these windows form a pyramid, and it's clear that the ancients were on to something.
