Content. In Maryse Conde's Crossing the Mangrove, a village on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe convenes at the funeral of a mystery man named Francis Sancher, whose short visit to the village left deep bonds and scars between the locals. The novel is the portrait of a place through the eyes of these locals who remain; though mysterious in plot, it is not a traditional mystery in that many stones remain unturned at the end of the novel.

Crossing the Mangrove Summary | SuperSummary

La mangrove symbolise le commencement de la vie, la naissance et la renaissance qui impliquent la mort, de la même façon que la nuit précède le « devant-jour » dans l'ordre des chapitres de Traversée de la mangrove.
